VAN DE GRAAFFS ARE DISMISSED BY RAILROAD

The lack of loyalty of Arie and Jan Van de Graaff has caused them to be dismissed from the services of the Union Depot & Railway company. They were employed at the local freight house.

It is understood that both young men were discharged upon the petition of associate employees, who proved to the satisfaction of the officials that the two young men, while not guilty of loyalty to the Kaiser, were guilty of a lack of loyalty to the United States in that they sought to evade army duty by claiming they were subjects of the queen of Holland.

Jans Van de Graaff, it is alleged, had posed as an American until he was called by the selective draft board. He then sought to evade service by claiming he was a subject of Queen Wilhelmina. Peculiarly, he had made oath in entering the Elks lodge that he was an American. It is understood he will be expelled from that organization tonight.

The position taken by the associate employees of the Van de Graaffs is that the family have been in the United States for years and years, have accepted the benefits that this country offers, that they left Holland because of lack of opportunity and now that this country will be placed before the school board at an early date.

CHIEF ISSUES ORDER TO ENEMY ALIENS OF OGDEN

Uncle Sam contemplates a tagging of enemy-allen of the Teuton brand that will put them on record and compel good behavior of the period of the war.

The registration which begins February 1 and continues to February 9, will compel every unassimilated German to appear at the proper registration place, give name, age and other personal data, and also file a series of four photographs and his finger prints. In Ogden the enemy alien will register at the police station. Chief Browning issued the following statement today relative to the method of registration:

"Registration shall be made by affidavit of the alien enemy required to register, to be executed in triplicate and accompanied by four unmounted photographs of the registrant, not larger than 3 by 3 inches in size, on thin paper, with a light background. Each photograph must be signed by the applicant across the face thereof so as not to obscure the features, if the applicant is able to write.

"Each alien enemy required to be registered shall be required to register his finger prints. Suggestions as to the method of taking finger prints are hereinafter contained.

"A registration card will be issued by the registration officer, in the form and in the manner and at the times more particularly hereinafter set forth, to each registrant who shall have properly registered under these regulations."

It is estimated that 200 Ogden residents are affected by the order and will be compelled to register.

CITIZENS OF OGDEN PROTECT COAL RATES

Citizens of Ogden testified before the public utilities commission of Utah today that the freight rates on coal had retarded the development of the city and the state as a whole. Comparisons were made with the growth of Seattle and San Francisco, both the coast cities out-distancing Ogden, although the latter was established before them.

The railroads seek an increase in the freight rate on coal of 15 cents a ton. The cities of Salt Lake and Ogden and private concerns are asking that the rates be reduced by thirty cents a ton, and Ogden is opposing the granting of any differential to Salt Lake.

STRIKE VIRTUALLY ENDED.

H. Zundel as he was boarding an electric car for Ogden.

HARD CIDER SOLD IN OGDEN CONTAINS MUCH ALCOHOL

"Wine is a mocker; strong drink is raging; and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise."

George Shorten, city sanitary commissioner, thus quoted King Solomon this afternoon when he announced that inebriates will have to add hard cider to their list of contraband. The cider as sold in Ogden, according to official test, is nearly 3 per cent alcohol and is capable of producing intoxication.

"Samples of hard cider sold in Ogden were sent to the state chemist and the analysis shows that it contains 2.93 per cent alcohol," said the official. "That means, the inebriate must beware of the cider cup as it will produce intoxication, and any liquid that effects such results is condemned."

The seller also comes within the prohibition law. He is liable to prosecution if he is found to be in the same per cent of alcohol as beer, and beer, next to straight-away Bourbon, is regarded as the chief evil at which prohibition is directed. Three glasses of cider contained the 2.93 per cent alcohol will partially derange the average man's mentality and cause him to partly lose his physical equilibrium. "This is a bad thing," said the official, "it will make him staggeringly drunk."

The announcement of the health officer coming immediately after Judge George S. Barker's suggestion that an investigation be made into the hard cider sales in Ogden, indicates that the hard cider merchant is going to have rough sledding in the future. Judge Barker's suggestion was made because of the frequency with which "hard-cider drunks" have been appearing in his court.

SERIOUS CHARGE MADE AGAINST LOCAL MERCHANT

J. Ruben, proprietor of a lower twenty-fifth street store, was taken into custody late yesterday afternoon by Deputy Sheriff William Brown and arraigned in municipal court this morning for assault and battery upon Emmett Mangel of Chicago.

If Mangel's charges are true, Ruben will be compelled to answer to a serious offense. Mangel claims he was enroute to the Pacific coast, and got off the train to purchase a shirt. Ruben did not have what he wanted, became angered because the man failed to make a purchase, and assaulted him.

ABE MAJORS PAROLED AFTER SERVING EIGHTEEN YEARS FOR KILLING CAPT. BROWN OF OGDEN

Abraham R. Majors, convicted May 12, 1899, for the murder of Captain

William Brown of the Ogden police force, sentenced to death and later to life imprisonment, was yesterday given his parole from the state penitentiary by the state board of pardons. The element of doubt has ever been a strong factor in the minds of Ogden people in the Majors' case. Whether he shot and killed Captain Brown, whether his brother Archie, Brown, older by four years than Abe, shot and killed the captain, or whether Captain Brown was shot and killed by members of the posse which went after the two youths in the hills near the Hot Springs, has ever remained a matter of conjecture.

There are many of the older peace officers of the community who still take firm sides on different aspects of the case. The Majors case has been one of the most sensational in the history of Utah's criminal records. For pure persistency in trying to receive pardon for the crime he was convicted of, Majors has far outstripped any other prisoner ever incarcerated in Utah. Time and again his petition for parole has been before the state board of pardons. Various organizations have interested themselves in attempts to secure clemency for the prisoner, and his friends and relatives have made unceasing attempts with the same fruitless result.

Long in Prison.

Majors has been in the state penitentiary a little more than half his life. He was convicted May 12, 1899 when 18 years of age, and was sentenced to be shot July 7, 1899. He appealed from the judgment of the lower court, but the judgment was affirmed and seeming certain doom faced the young man. The execution day was postponed to August 17, 1900. Majors appealed for a new trial but was refused and finally carried the appeal to the supreme court where an order was issued setting aside the order of the lower court denying Majors' motion and granting him a new trial. At the second trial, Majors was convicted of murder in the second degree, the jury recommending mercy, but the court sentenced him to life imprisonment. He appealed from this judgment. The appeal was heard during the fall term of the supreme court in 1903 but the judgment was affirmed December 15, of the same year.

Mrs. L. D. Wagner, Majors' mother, who lives in Salt Lake has been striving with every power at her command during three years to secure the pardon of her son. She interested Attorney J. W. McKinney three years ago in the case and the attorney likewise followed every opportunity of pleading his client's case before the state board of pardons. He secured affidavits from the jurors who sat at the trial of Majors and got additional evidence from many sources from time to time which he has been building into a strong web of proof of the justice of Majors' claim.

Attorney Pleaded.

"It is very pleasing to me to learn that the state board of pardons has granted the application of Majors for parole," Attorney McKinney said last night. "For three years I have devoted what time I had to his case, and the longer I studied it the stronger became my conviction that Majors should be extended clemency, especially in view of the fact that he had been so long incarcerated. The board has not given him a chance, and I believe he will prove his worthiness of the confidence reposed in him, and that he will be an honorable and useful member of society. I understand that he has not only educated himself in a general way during his confinement, but that he has mastered the tailors' trade. One thing that has always impressed me favorably about Majors is his tender and devoted love for his mother, who has been shattered by long years of suffering and hardship. The joy that his release will bring to his heart."

"There is not a man in all the world tonight happier than I am," Majors said last night. "But my heart is not so full of joy that there is not room for gratitude—gratitude for the action of the board of pardons in giving me an opportunity to live, to work, to be useful, to live a moral life and to seek happiness. I shall make all the members of the board, my mother and all my dear friends glad that I have a chance to prove that I am a man by living as a man should."

When asked as to his plans for the future, Majors replied that he had mapped out nothing definite. He said Samuel Newhouse, to whom he has been paroled, will provide him with some occupation by which he can make a living.

History of Case.
The slaying of Captain William A. Brown of the Ogden police department occurred on April 30, 1899, shortly after the robbery of a man named Fred Hanson on the outskirts of Brigham City, April 29. On that day Archie Majors, who was then 22 years of age, and Abraham R. Majors, who was 18 years of age held up and robbed Hanson of some milk. They tied him and continued along the road. Hanson released himself and informed the officers of what had happened.

Sheriff Cardon of Box Elder county, Deputy Sheriff Thompson and Constable G. J. Wells started in pursuit of the boys and found them near the Hot Springs. The brothers refused to halt and the officers opened fire. The Majors boys returned the fire and fled into the hills.

Sheriff Charles Layne of Weber county, and his deputies, Gilbert Belnap, Joseph Bailey and Captain Brown, were summoned from Ogden and arrived on the scene about daylight of the next day. The deputies then divided into groups and proceeded in pursuit of the two young men. On April 30, about 2 o'clock in the afternoon, Sheriff Cardon, Deputy Belnap and Captain Brown encountered the boys in a sort of box canyon on the mountain near what is now the Wedell farm. They commanded them to halt but they refused and a fight ensued. Archie Majors was shot and Captain Brown also, the latter falling immediately after Archie Majors was hit. The other officers then closed in on Abe Majors and forced him to surrender.

Maintained Innocence.
Abraham Majors was supposed to have fired the shot which killed Captain Brown, although he contended after that his brother had shot the captain just before he was fatally wounded. His trial followed in a very short time and he was convicted of first degree murder and sentenced to be shot.

While the matter has not been pursued very extensively in Ogden, there seems to be a preponderance of opinion that the pardon board was dealing justly with the prisoner by granting him his parole. There are some who declared today, after hearing of the action of the board, that Majors should still be in the penitentiary and should serve his full term, life, as they are thoroughly convinced he was guilty of the crime charged.

Others, among them older officers of the police and sheriff's departments gave it as their opinion that the man had suffered keenly for the crime and that his parole would meet the ends of justice.

Gilbert Belnap, who was a deputy under Sheriff Layne at the time of the fatal shooting, expressed great surprise when told of the action of the pardon board, but made no further comment.
